MULLER UNDER FIRE.

Cross-Examination of Dr. Meyer's

His Disgraceful Career in the West

Mrs. Meyer's Manner Has Become More Subdued.

Several women gained entrance to the Court of Oyer and Terminer this morning, and were deeply interested spectators when the cross-examination of Carl Muller, the confessed accomplice, was taken up by Charles W. Brooke, in the trial of Dr. Henry C. F. Meyer, accused of poisoning Ludwig Brandt, alias Baum, to death with croton oil, antimony, arsenic and iron in March, 1892.

generally believed that any human being would become an informer and a State's witness, implicating himself in a foul murder, if no murder were committed. Dr. Meyer says Muller's real name is the alleged sick man Brandt, alias Baum

The mysterious woman with a striking resemblance to Dr. Meyer, the alleged poisoner, is a stranger to him, he declares, but to an "Evening World" reporter who interrogated him, he said, with a significant expression, that he had a married sister living in this country. He would not admit, however, that the mysterious Mrs. Manger was that sister, although she has frequently consulted him about evidence that has been given and other evidence that is to come. Mrs. Meyer was more serious in her behavior in court to-day. Evidently she had been receiving some good advice on that point to the effect that even innocent people or auditors in cour; were hardly expected to be gierful and happy during the recital of the horrors told by Carl Muller.

Dr. Meyer had evidently had a talking.

during the recital of the horrors told by Carl Muller.

Dr. Meyer had evidently, had a talking to also, and his mouth, voluable on Baturday to an "Evening World" reporter, was freshly and more securely sesied again to-day.

Mr. Brooke, cross-examining Muller, got him to tell, as Dr. Meyer told "The Evening World" Saturday, that he was born near Cologne, and his father was a schoolmaster.

"How came you to leave Germany?" asked Mr. Brooke, sternly.

"Because I lost my place."

"Was it not because you were charged with firing a building? And did you not get mixed up in an assault upon an aged

"No, sir," replied the witness without the faintest show of resentment in his voice or manner.

To the succeeding questions Muller said his father gave him the money to come to America in 1883. He registered on the steamer as Karl Kirfel. He was never a professor of music at Antwerp, but spent a little time as a teacher at Aix la Chappelle.

He reiterated his denial of having played the plano in disorderly houses in Antwerp. He went to Philadelphia after a little stay in New York, but he could not remember what houses he stopped at in either city. After five days in Philadelphia, he went to Newport, Ky., for ten days, there he stopped at a saloon, and looked for work with Hubert Dreinacht, a miller, who came from Germany with him.

Kansas City held Muller and his friend from June to September, when he lived at 233 Main street, a borading-house kept by August Krieger. His father gave him 500 marks, or 3123. He paid $22 for his passage.

From Kansas City he went to Chicago, where he was in a hospital with typhokal fever, which he contracted on the train. After two months in the hospital Muller went to a boarding-house for two days, then to August Hacker, a cake-buker, at Division and Larramee streets, for two weeks, learning how to bake cake, at £ a week and board.

He was discharged by the cake baker, returned to the boarding-house for a week and then got employment with Clancey, a milk dealer in Claibone avenue for two days he returned to Chicago to 62 Welch street, a saloon keet by Keyser. Then he played a plano at £5 a week for one consecutive week. Then he went to 66 Welch street, another saloon and boarding-house cheek and hen yellowed for two weeks, and was employed in a disorderly house as a plano player.

You were known as "Plano Charle," weren't you at this place, 108 Michigan avenue? asked Mr. Brooke.

Mullerdeelared that he didn't know. He got "Il an light and extras" for this After a fortnight there he took a similar position at "Cora Pearl's," 112 Mich.

"At Cora Pearl's you were known a: "The Professor, weren't you?" asked Lehmeyer, of New York City, has begun an attachment suit in the Sangamon Circuit Court against the New York firm of N. J. Schlors & Co., clothing merchants, which failed recently.

Lehmeyer was for a number of years a travelling salesman for the firm, and asserts that he allowed his salary and-commissions to remain in its hands until it now owes him, he claims, $20,000. This was because Lehmeyer expected to become a partner in the firm.

Writs of attachment were issued to the counties of Adams, Alexander, Will, Jo, Daviess, Henry, Champagn, Macon, McLean and Livingston, for the purpose of garniseeing whatever outstanding accounts may be due the firm from its customers in these counties.
